

QuickBooks: The currency of the account must be either in home currency or the transaction currency

Last Modified on 04/16/2024 10:15 am EDT

Issue

When we send an invoice to QuickBooks, by default we do not specify the account receivable associated with it. When this happens QuickBooks tries to use the same account that was used on the most recently entered document of the same type. In this case an invoice.

Effect

The error occurs when an invoice is being posted for a customer with a currency that is different than the account receivable currency from the most recent invoice.

Solution

The work around is to specify the account receivable. You can do this by opening the terms in QuickBooks and assigning accounts receivable there. Then make sure a term with the correct account is on the Ship Doc.
